Headline:

Wet and windy in northwest, very mild in southeast.

Today:

Band of rain across central and western areas, locally heavy over hills. Dry elsewhere but rather windy with scattered blustery showers in far northwest. Very mild across southeast.

Tonight:

Rain moving southeastwards across England and Wales, turning light/patchy. Clearer weather following with frost in shelter; and showers across far northwest. Winds easing.

Thursday:

Cloud and outbreaks of rain eventually clearing the southeast. Elsewhere, sunny spells and mainly dry, though showers across northwest Scotland. Windy in the far north.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:

Outbreaks of rain in the northwest on Friday, otherwise turning increasingly dry and settled with variable amounts of cloud. Temperatures near average to mild with some overnight frosts.
